NEW DECOMPRESSION TABLE RELIEVES PAIN

Darren Strong from Strong Chiropractic, announces a new, sophisticated computerized decompression table that allows the spine to be gently stretched and relaxed for spinal decompression therapy.

The pattern of alternating pulling and relaxing creates vacuum-like pressure which allows disc material that was herniated or protruded to be pulled back in the disc over time.

Patients will notice a reduction of their pain during these treatment sessions. Stop in today and ask about the new table and how you can benefit.

With summer officially here it's nice to get out and enjoy the great weather days, but on rainy ones it's also nice to find something good to watch; I re-watched the movie "War For The Planet of the Apes" the other day because I am a consummate "Apes" fan, falling in love with the franchise when I saw the original movie that was released in 1968, and the TV series in 1974. Soon I was buying the action figures (during the 1970s, 20th Century Fox licensed close to 60 companies to produce over 300 different "Apes" products, including the action figures, playsets, model building kits, coloring books, book-and-record sets, trading cards, toy weapons, costumes, apparel, branded tableware, and lunch boxes). This level of merchandising was unheard of at the time, and the success of the Apes merchandise inspired campaigns that later became commonplace for films and television series. The first remake or "retelling" of the apes saga was in 2001, made by Tim Burton and starring Mark Wahlberg (many picked it apart, but I liked it a lot). The incredible "Rise of the Planet of the Apes" in 2011 set the bar very high with the introduction of Andy Serkis (who also played Gollum in the "Lord of the Rings" series) as the motion-capture maestro playing the ape leader Caesar, with John Lithgow as the father of James Franco—a scientist looking for a cure for Alzheimer's disease. It was an amazing film. Then it was 2014's "Dawn of the Planet of the Apes", and then 2017's "War For The Planet of the Apes" that both featured great storylines, characters and CGI effects that set a new standard, both creatively and visually. The improvements in motion-capture and CGI in those 2 films really was astounding, giving us apes that are so believable—with facial expressions, movements, realistic fur and especially eyes that captivate and mesmerize. Two additional films are being planned as we speak, which will no doubt take the franchise to a whole new realm, and I can't wait to see them.

Interesting But Useless Trivia

Many moons ago when I was an apprentice printer at the Cape Breton Post, one of my jobs was to set short fillers that were used at the end of a story to fill space.

The fillers usually consisted of trivia and interesting facts. The apprenticeship was 6 years long so you can guess how many fillers I set.

Here are a few to give you an insight into the trivia world. 160 cars can drive side by side on the Monumental Axis in Brazil the world's widest road.

A 10 gallon hat holds only 6 pints of liquid.

A jiffy is actually a time measurement it's length is 1/100th of a second.

A jumbo jet uses 4000 gallons of fuel to take off.

A quarter has 119 groves along its edge while a dime has 118.

Dreamt is the only English word that ends in "mt".

Every time you lick a stamp, you are consuming 1/10th of a calorie.

And then there is this protocol for statues which I never knew existed.

If a statue in the park of a person on a horse has both front legs in the air, the person died in battle; if the horse has one front leg in the air, the person died as a result of wounds received in battle; if the horse has all four legs on the ground, the person died of natural causes. Who knew?

The only reason I brought this up at all is because somebody asked me in town recently where I get all that weird stuff in the paper.

Here are a few more that you might find interesting.

You blink over twenty million times a year.

In 1984, a Canadian farmer began renting ad space on his cows.

In every episode of "Seinfeld" there is a Superman somewhere.

I Fought The Law

With Summer in the air and the fishing season open, I thought you might enjoy this little story from "Tall Tales & Udder Lies" book about the perils of fishing.

This is another "Cat" story. Cat was a pretty good fisherman but he didn't have too much money. The Fish & Game Wardens would crack down on fisherman who did not purchase licenses.

On this particular day, he and his pal "Slippery Tom" Patterson were fishing and they heard the Warden coming out of the woods. Immediately Slippery Tom jumps up and starts running madly down the path and into the woods.

Cat stays where he's at calmly fishing while the Warden decides to take off after Tom. After about 20 minutes the Warden comes upon Tom huffing and puffing on the path.

Tom reaches into his pocket and pulls out his fishing license. The Warden takes one look at it and demands of Tom, "Then why in the hell did you run away?"

Tom looks at him and says, "Oh, I knew I had a license but Cat, he can't afford it." Naturally by the time the Warden returned to the fishing hole The Cat had long since flown the coop. It pays to have a plan.
